

JODIE COMER, TAYLOR SWIFT, BEYONCÈ AND ZENDAYA HAVE BEEN ANNOUNCED AS THE WORLD'S MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

All determined by the math we didn't learn in grade school.

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder — but maybe the “beholder” is a coveted plastic surgeon. Dr. Julian De Silva, a facial cosmetic surgeon, has utilized the latest computerized mapping strategy to apply an Ancient Greek technique, “Golden Ratio of Beauty,” to derive the world’s most beautiful women.

The Golden Ratio of Beauty, aka Phi, is a mathematical method in which there are formulas applied to determine physical perfection. According to the Ancient Greeks, beauty can be measured by specific ratios on one’s face and body. In the numeral form, the closer the ratios are to 1.618, which equals Phi, the more desirable a person is said to be. Dr. De Silva recently dubbed actor Jodie Comer the world’s most beautiful woman as her facial elements equaled the perfected ratio. “She had the highest overall reading for positioning her nose and lips, with a score of 98.7%, which is only 1.3% away from being the perfect shape.” Dr. De Silva explained to Yahoo.

Other contenders such as Beyoncé, Zendaya and Taylor Swift met the physical qualifications to be marked as the world’s most beautiful women. Keep reading on for the top 10 most beautiful according to Ancient Greek methodology.
